Project Center solves a lot of problems that people in the design industry face. In terms of transferring data from place to place, management of data coming in and going out of the office. Housekeeping within your own organization will improve and making sure things are filed accurately and do not fall between the cracks. That piece of correspondence and actions that need to come out of the correspondence are not missed that they can be posted and followed up on, flagged to other people. Prior to NF, email sat in inboxes or Outlook filing system. At the end of the day they were not recorded with project data. With Project Center we seamlessly file to the project, so emails are discoverable by other team members. If someone leaves or is absent, we can still get at them.
